Ansodotes of Great Men.

BY THE REV. W. S. BLACKSTOCK. Dr. Samuel Johnson, though a lover of anecdotes, did not set a high value upon many of the tales which are told about great men. He doubted the utility of a stery, the only effect of which is to make the subject of it appear ridiculous. Even when these narratives were strictly true he could not see that it was worth while to put them on record. "I know not well," sald he, in an essay written in defence of anacdotes, " what advantage posterity can receive from the one chromatanes by which Ticknell has distinguished Addison from the rest of mankind—the kregolarity of his pulse ; nor can I think myself overpaid for the time spent in reading the life of Malherbe by being enabled to relate, after the learned biographer, that Malherhe had two predominant opinions; one that the looseness of a single weman might destroy all her bonst of absingt descent; the other that the French beggars made use very improperly and barbarously of the phrase mobis gentleman, because either word in-

It is probable that he would have been even severer in his statetures on these collectors of anecdotes, if he could have foreseen what would be made of some of the incldents of his own life. Without there anecdotes, however, posterity would not have had moomplate pisture of the man; and, on the whole, even those who have most respect for his memory do not regret that they have been preserved and handed down to succeeding generations. Happliy he had great qualities enough to render it nonecessary for his weaknesses and faults to be overlooked and forgotten. A less brilliant luminary than the sun would be dimmed and disfigured by the spots which he bears upon the surface; but his transcendent effalgence makes us unconscious of their presence.

THE SPARROWS MUST GO.

By the dissection of many hundred specimens it has been proved that he per cent, of the food of the spar-rows consists of grain or assets of some kind, and insect food only about 0 per cent, and that they consume in Great Scitate alone four militan bushels of grain annually. The Union Ornothologist recommends as fol-lows:—First. "That sheltering or otherwise fertering the sparrow by the public, be discouraged, and that its introduction artificially into now localities, and its sale for such purposes, be forbidden by law." Second, "That all existing laws protecting the sparrow be repealed, and that bounties be offered for its destruction."

CONSIST OF A PATENT SHOT CARTRIDGE. These cariridges are made in the ordinary class of Rim and Central Fire for both Pistols and Rifles. The These caristôges are made in the ordinary sizes of Rim and Central Firs for both Pistols and Rifles. The shot is enclosed in a thick paper case, packed closely, and when set in the shell has the appearance of being the weapon, and theroughly cleans and oils the barrel, and at the same time acting as a shot concentrator.

The 21 long, 32 long and 33 long Rim Fire Cartridges are adapted to Revolvers, to Flobert, Remington, Bailard, shavens, and other Rifles of those calibres. The 22 Cartridges are all made with No. 12 Chilled Shot, while in 32 and 35 the shot is larger, say No. 9 shot, and more of it. Those sizes are especially adapted for sparrows or other small birds, and especially for quall, partridges, squirrels, and other small game.

From testimontals received, we notice that for rate and cate they have been largely used, especially for abode in some place remade from the man who owns a rifle or pistol and hosps a stock of shot pertridges about his hone.

The S & W. signs—52 and 38—are used largely by persons who own a better class of revolvers, such as M B & Co's Automatic Revolvers, S & W. Revolvers, and the better grade of Bull Dog Revolvers, such as X b Eufl Dog or better class of Am. Bull Dogs, or any other good C. F. Pistol. Persons who are not owners of rifles can take a far hundred of these cartridges with them on their summer vaccations and have really as much apart with them by using about in their revolvers, as do those who carry rifles. The 44 Winobastor Shot Cartridges (No 6 and S shot) are adapted to the Winchester Magazine Rifle and all Frontier Pistols of thems callbre, and are used for shooting prairie oblekens on the western prairies.
